Gary Chapman : Retro Paris: The Way We Were before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Retro Paris: The Way We Were:

Take a walk back in time with this collection of amazingly evocative photographs of one of the great cities in the world. Retro Paris is a collection of historical images from the Mary Evans Photo Library depicting the development of fashion trends from the start of the 20th Century to the 1970s and 1980s. Beautifully presented in hardcover format with padded cover and more than 400 unique images, Retro Paris is a visual snapshot of a wonderful era now long past. An ideal gift for Francophiles everywhere! (Gary Chapman)

About the Author Gary Chapman has worked in the book publishing industry for over thirty years focused primarily on non-fiction titles and in various marketing capacities for such companies as Pan Books, Merehurst, Charles Letts, Constable Robinson, Sutton and The History Press. After setting up Edditt Publishing in 2012 he has republished The Dolly Sisters and his latest book is London's Hollywood: The Gainsborough Studio in the Silent Years. He is currently working on various other book projects all with a 1920s theme. He is fortunate in being able to follow his passions publishing, marketing books, writing, The Jazz Age and making cakes.
