hour or more, for relaxing, have solved Sudokus. And the most of these being from the books written by Will Shortz of which I owe 7. I have over the years bought around 20 Sudoku books and only found the Mensas Absolutely Nasty, Level 4, and maybe the "Sudoku X", in difficulty being equal to those made by Will Shortz. Some of these 20 books were too easy so that I didn't manage using energy on "solving" all of their problems (missing problems). All of the Sudoku problems that I get on, either by books or newspaper and magazines, I by Excel put into my PCs. This both because I only can use the left hand and therefore have problem holding the books and papers, but also for storing them in the PCs and then later again solve the same Sudoku in new files. And then later when comparing the old and the new solutions to see if I during the time have become better in solving the same Sudokus. I use different colors and marks. And I can see that when I 5 years ago started on Sudoku many 9*9 took me up to an hour, but now I no longer in book or papers meet any that reach 30 minutes. Of course there exist some Sudoku being much more difficult, but not in the books and newspaper that I've found. But in the Danish Engineering News, 5 years ago, which made me start on Sudoku, there was a couple from competition and they took me hours. I over the years for the second time again have solved all of the Sudokus in a couple books written by Will Shortz. And now I'm again are working on, and have made much of these in this "Fascinatingly Fierce Sudoku", which I original received in January 2009, and then solved for the first time. And referring to the quality and difficulty of the problems I find that it's one of the best of Will Shortz books which I until now have bought. One of the reviewers writes that the correct Sudokus shall have the original numbers arranged so that the pattern is the same, also upside down. I have newer before seen this statement printed anywhere, and beside have all of the Sudokus I yet have solved, and which was so arranged, been among the easiest to solve. Which also can be seen in my recommendation in April on the Expert Sudoku? 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful.
