One of the great world chess championship match books with annotations by the winnerBy CustomerThis was Alekhine last match played for the chess world championship. A grand affair it was as he was suppose to be a over the hill chess champion. He worked very hard to over come the many bad habits and failings that were present in his first match with the challenger and soon to become world champion Dr. Max Euwe. His success was a great triumph and signaled a return to form for this great champion.The games and annotations reveal the hard work both men put into this struggle for the chess world championship. This book stands a worthy record of these two great chess champions playing the game they love at the highest level. Any chess player can learn from such a book as it represents some of the best chess for this time period. Alekhine's annotations and notes are always illuminating and enlightening for chess players of all levels.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Alekhine and EuweBy LahoreIt is always a bit suspect, reading a player's coverage of his own game, but with Alekhine this is probably groundless. Particularly because in this book, Aleikhine's opponent, the Dutch Euwe is so well represented, with notes to the games coming from both sides, giving a particular insight into the psyche of both players. A master when it comes to written chess, this book covers his titanic comeback after losing the world title to Euwe in 1935. Alekhine's tremendous preparation, studying Euwe's technique carefully before hand, all of which culminated in a stunning and above all an elegant victory, is thrilling to watch. An ideal read for the chess enthusiast.
